While November may have brought news that we weren't looking forward to, it also delivered news of some pretty excellent new places to eat and drink around LA where we can at least temporarily distract ourselves from that other news. From a welcome roster of new ramen joints and Italian spots to hidden eateries and the return of a Valley legend, here are the best LA openings of November 2016. Dig in.

HUMPHREY YOGART

SHERMAN OAKS

Fear not: All hope is not lost. Longtime Valley favorite with the punny Bogie-frozen-dessert name has returned in a new location after a concerning hiatus. Now tucked inside the Gelson's on Van Nuys Blvd, the legendary spot has streamlined its menu, ditching sandwiches, salads, and the low-carb/sugar-free groceries, instead focusing on its signature frozen yogurt, ice cream, shakes, and smoothies. The big draw here is the signature blends which feature hard-packed nonfat yogurt (available in vanilla, chocolate, tart, and soy), which is then blended with your choice of over 45 toppings, included fresh fruit, candy, cookies, and nuts. Trust us, you'll get hooked.
